● MINI NATURAL HISTORY

Amber's compact photographic guides offer a highly illustrated insight into the lives of dangerous animals, wolves, horses, tigers, bears and dogs, amongst others. Each volume includes at least 160 photographs exploring breeds, lifecycle, behaviour, characteristics and rearing young. Excellent for readers of all ages, these are the perfect impulse buys for animal enthusiasts and natural history fans looking to learn more about their favourite species.

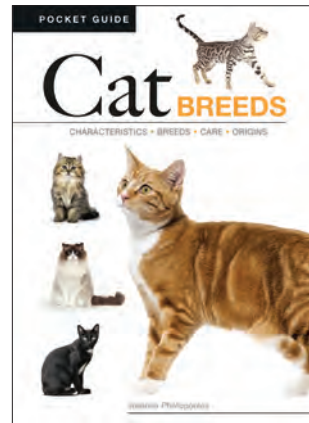

Abyssinian

One of the most popular breeds, the Abyssinian was developed in the United Kingdom, with records dating back to the 1890s. But its exact origins remain somewhat of a mystery. Some people believe Abyssinians are the direct descendants of the sacred cats of ancient Egyptians, while others suggest they originated in Abyssinia – what is now Ethiopia – and travelled alongside British soldiers to England. One of these cats from Ethiopia is said to be Zula, who won first prize in the 1871 Crystal Palace cat show. However, genetic research has shown that Abyssinians may have originated near the coast of the Indian Ocean. Regardless of where the Abyssinian hailed from, the modern breed is wildly captivating with its almond-shaped eyes, large ears and distinctive ticked coat, where each hair has alternating bands of dark and light colours called 'agouti'. Active and curious, the Abyssinian is constantly on the move and spends most of its day following its owners around, playing, climbing or exploring every nook and cranny – anything to not sit still but always in the company of others!

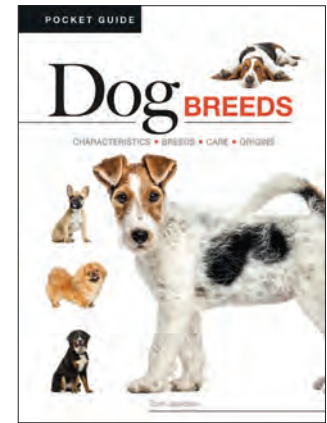

CHARACTERISTICS
Coat	Several colours with distinct ticking pattern
Height	214-482 (67-146)
Weight	12-15 (3-4)
Personality	Outgoing, intelligent, playful
Origin	South of the Indian Ocean / Ethiopia

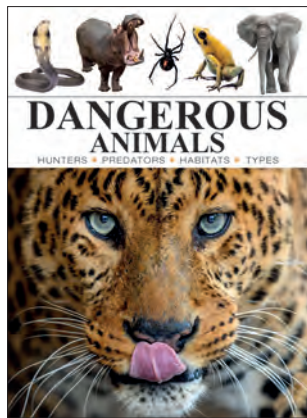

Notes:
 An Abyssinian looks wild in the classic oddball-breed coat with black ticking, known as 'tuddy'.
 Ancient origin: The Abyssinian is named after Abyssinia (now Ethiopia) where it was believed to have originated.

In Thebes developed it became important to be located on the west bank of the Nile within the domain of the principal Egyptian god. From about 1550 to 1350 BC kings and a few favoured family members or court officials were buried by having dug into the sides of the Valley of the Kings, where they could be more effectively guarded. Although these burial places might be secret, many New Kingdom kings built temples for their cult in a great necropolis the Nile. From south to north, these include Medinet Habu (Ramesses III (1184-1153 BC)), the temple of Amenhotep III (1370-1332 BC), the 'Temple of Ramesses II' (1279-1213 BC), the temple of Hatshepsut (1473-1458 BC) at Deir el Bahari and the temple of Sen T (1294-1279 BC).

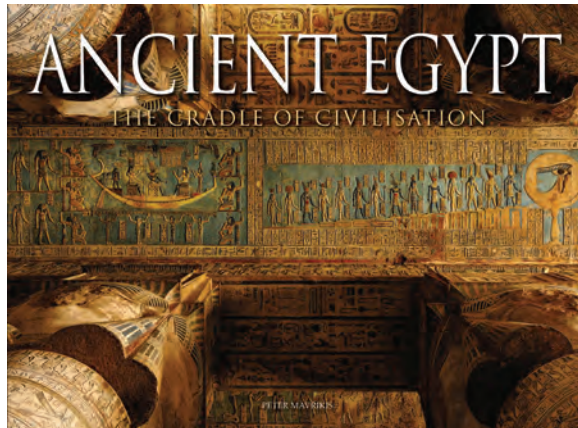

LUXOR TEMPLE AND THE AVENUE OF SPHINXES
 The area around Luxor (ancient Thebes) temple known 'The City of Gates' (Thebes (Thebes) contains the greatest concentration of major ancient monuments in the world. The furthest south of these on the east bank is Luxor Temple.

Four Pillars, Luxor Temple
 The temple was dedicated to Amun-Ra in 1795-1712 BC, together with the four other temples to illustrate the relationship between the king and the gods. The temple was completed by Amenhotep III (1370-1332 BC). The temple was destroyed by Amenhotep IV (Akhenaten) (1353-1336 BC). The temple was destroyed by Amenhotep IV (Akhenaten) (1353-1336 BC).  The vast, sprawling 150-hectare (370-acre) complex at Karnak (left) is the most sacred of the ancient Egyptian temples. It was built by Amenhotep III (1370-1332 BC) and Amenhotep IV (Akhenaten) (1353-1336 BC). The temple was destroyed by Amenhotep IV (Akhenaten) (1353-1336 BC). Tenth King of Hell
 In the Buddhist world, the Ten Kings of Hell serve as judges of the deeds and to determine their fate, including the type and severity of punishment and the course of their cycle of rebirth. This painting depicts the Tenth King of Hell in the standard guise of a warrior, and originally formed part of a set of ten scrolls (six of which were formerly in collection of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and now at Shinheung Temple). Seated prominently in the center, the king is surrounded by a retinue of attendants and significant figures of the underworld, including messengers, judges, and soldiers. At the top right corner, two figures float on a rainbowlike stream (a symbol of the six paths of rebirth) emanating from a double-headed bearded figure (representing the Evil Spirit) at the lower right. The dead, receiving punishments for their transgressions, populate the lower half of the painting. Nam libero tempore, cum soluta nobis est eligendi optio cumque nihil impedit quo minus id quod maxime placeat serum hic tenetur a sapiente delectus, ut aut et eligendi voluptatibus maiores alias consequatur aut perferendis doloribus asperiores repellat totam rem aperiam, eaque ipsa quae ab illo inventore veritatis et quasi architecto beatae vitae dicta.

King Tongmyong
 The myth of King Tongmyong (or Dongmyeong) is a semi-legendary account of the founder of the ancient Korean kingdom of Goguryeo. The stories, which differ slightly across sources like the Samsak sagi and Samsak yusa, typically describe his divine birth from a large egg laid by his mother, who was impregnated by sunlight after being tricked by a celestial being. He faced many hardships, including attempts on his life and being cast out into a piggy and a horse stable, but survived due to divine intervention.
